Local carnival group Paraiso (above) have been working with performers and artists from Rio, ahead of the One Hackney Festival parade on 21 July

FROM RIO WITH LOVE

THE most spectacular street parade that Hackney has ever seen will take place on Saturday, 21 July, to welcome the Olympic torch to the borough.

All eyes will be on the 2,000-strong One Hackney Festival parade when performers and artists from Rio join local groups such as Tropical Isles and Paraiso to deliver a spectacular combination of dance, music and costume.

The parade will begin at 10.30am, when a single horse-drawn Hackney cab leaves Pitfield Street, Shoreditch, to make its way up Kingsland Road. The parade will feature 15 floats, including six 'soundscapes' – which tell the story of Hackney – as it travels along a 2.8 mile route through Hoxton and Dalston, arriving at Stoke Newington Church Street just before 2pm.

Sounds along the route will range from electro, Afrobeat and party vibes, to music inspired by Carnival tradition.

Joining local DJs and musicians, is a 35-strong troupe of top musicians from Brazil, who are coming over specially to take part in the parade. The Rio-London collaboration, delivered by Create London on behalf of the London 2012 Festival, includes samba groups from Rio, such as Fundacao Progresso's Monobloco and Sargento Pimenta (Sergeant Pepper – a Beatles tribute act) and the leading disabled carnival group, Embaixadores da Alegria.

There will also be plenty of entertainment throughout the borough, including the arrival of the Olympic torch at Shoreditch High Street just before 4pm.

In a change of schedule, a free, ticketed Clissold Park event to celebrate the torch's arrival in Hackney has been cancelled because the site is waterlogged and has been deemed unsafe. Anyone who booked tickets is being contacted.

The torch relay will end at around 6.30pm when the last Hackney torchbearer hands over the flame to Waltham Forest.

The Summer Reading Challenge is the biggest national reading initiative for young people and runs in libraries throughout the holidays

Reading challenge

CHILDREN are invited to step into a world of adventure through Story Lab – this summer's reading challenge at Hackney libraries.

The Council has developed the school holiday activity programme in order to encourage four to 11-year-olds to read more books and use public libraries. It runs from 16 July to 7 September.

The task is simple: read six or more books of choice during the holidays. Every child who completes the challenge will receive collectable incentives and rewards – plus a certificate or medal.

To help youngsters on their way, a Story Lab website has been set up as a place to read, collect, create, and share stories.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Libraries are free and a great place for children and families to spend time. Why not pop down and find out more about this summer's challenge and help your children discover a love of stories and books?"

The Council will also be holding reading challenge days for participants on:

“ Libraries are free and a great place for children and families to spend time ”

8 September at Hackney Central, Shoreditch, Stamford Hill and Clapton libraries; 10 September, Woodberry Down Library; 15 September at Dalston at Homerton and Stoke Newington libraries.

Inspiring others

Dame Kelly Holmes with pupils from Haggerston school; Kelly with Headteacher Dr Jane Keeley and Christiana Egere (inset)

DAME Kelly Holmes spent a day inspiring a new generation of potential Olympians when she visited Haggerston school. Speaking to the pupils, she said: "When I was 12, my PE teacher inspired me to get involved in sport – it all started at school." Dame Kelly met with Christiana Egere, a student who secured a place on the Olympic torch relay though the school's partnership with law firm Freshfields, and the school's Headteacher Dr Jane Keeley. The 2004 double Olympic champion also opened a school community festival and planted a time capsule due to be opened on 7 July 2062.

Haggerston school has taken part in a number of Olympic activities in the run-up to London 2012, including kayaking with an Olympic medallist and speaking with Paralympian Richard Whitehead.

A night at the village

VOLUNTEERS from Hackney were among the first people to stay in the Olympic Athletes' Village before it opened its doors to the world's greatest sportsmen and women on 16 July.

They got an exclusive look around the accommodation and facilities, which will be a home-from-home for athletes during the Games.

All five volunteers are

Hackney Hosts – residents who are supporting 2012-related activities within the borough and helping to promote the Olympic and Paralympic Games among their communities.

They were among 1,000 people invited to spend a night at the Athletes' Village for a test run of the complex, which will host over 15,000 athletes.

The volunteers were given

“The dining room was massive, with different foods from all parts of the world”

a tour of the grounds, which are split into three zones based on typical British scenes – the seaside, countryside and heritage – and slept in the athletes' apartments.

They were also shown around the Olympic Park and introduced to Olympic gold medal winning triple jumper Jonathan Edwards.

Afterwards, the volunteers enjoyed dinner in the 5,000-seat dining room which will serve 45,000 meals a day.

Rose Nevers, a driver for Hackney community transport, said: "The dining room was massive, with different foods from all parts of the world."

"We ended our day at The Globe, the athletes' nightclub, which was really good – and there was live music."

Day-Mer community event fun

HACKNEY'S longest running festival has successfully celebrated its 23rd year this summer.

The finale of the 2012 Day-Mer festival took place in Clissold Park on Sunday, 4 July.

The annual, free cultural event was the conclusion of a programme of artistic and cultural activities for all ages, organised by the Turkish and Kurdish Community Centre in Hackney. There was traditional dancing and cuisine, as well as musical performances and addresses by guest speakers from both Turkey and the UK.

For over two decades the Day-Mer centre has provided advice, information on access to services, education and cultural activities.

The annual programme features a range of artistic and cultural events which aims to bring together people from Hackney's diverse communities.

Free bay parking for shoppers

TEMPORARY free parking bays for customers have been created outside Hackney shops for the duration of the London 2012 Games to support local business.

Shop owners will have to apply to the Council for the vouchers, which are valid for a maximum of three hours, with no return within two hours.

There is no limit to the number of vouchers businesses can request and give out to customers. All the vouchers are valid until 9 September.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "I'd like to remind shoppers that local shops and businesses have free visitors' parking vouchers that their customers can use."

"It's important that we continue to support local businesses over the summer, which is why the Council ensured free parking vouchers and temporary bays were available during Games time."

The majority of Games time parking restrictions are in operation from 21 June to 9 September.

Gaining confidence

Older people in the borough received advice on safety and security, including tips on spotting bank fraud and scammers

BOGUS canvassers posing as utility workers and other forms of 'scamming' were the focus of an event for older people this month. More than 100 residents attended the 'Safe and Secure in Hackney and the City' workshop at the Cre-8 Life Style Centre, in Hackney Wick, on 5 July.

Advice was given on how to stay safe when answering the door; contracts signed at home; the Buy With Confidence scheme; and consumer credit.

Visitors also heard about blocking nuisance telephone calls, including those from international call centres, bank card fraud and courier scams.

There were top tips on outdoor safety, such as using public transport and taxis, as well as what to do if confronted with anti-social behaviour.

Inspector Andy Walker; and Cllr Julius Nkafu, Cabinet Adviser on Crime and Community Safety.

Sheila Suso-Runge, HCEB chair, said: "The forum provided a lively information flow between police, local authority, partners and the local community with older residents asking questions and getting answers."

Cynthia White, Chair of the Older People's Reference Group, added: "Removing rogue traders from Hackney is a major aim for this borough. This partnership work helps to protect our senior residents."

Cllr Nkafu concluded: "This was a very successful event; more should take place in the future."

The event was hosted by Hackney Community Engagement Board (HCEB) and City and Hackney's Older People Reference Group.

Council trading standards officers made presentations, with contributions from Matthew Horne, Hackney police Borough Commander; Safer Neighbourhoods Chief

Apprentice scheme launched

HACKNEY Homes is calling for young people to play a part in building the borough's future by joining its 2012 apprentice scheme.

The programme is designed to give 16 to 18-year-olds a chance to learn a trade within the repairs and maintenance industry.

Trainees will be provided with quality training, paid work experience and an industry recognised qualification on completion of their course. As well as on the job experience, the apprentices will learn construction skills by attending college one day a week.

On participating in the scheme, third year apprentice carpenter, Derrie O'Halloran (below), said: "It's been a great learning experience. I have overcome a lot and had some great teachers along the way. I love that every day is different and no two jobs are the same."

Cllr Philip Glanville, Cabinet Adviser for Hackney Homes, added: "The apprentice scheme is a great opportunity for young people to gain practical experience which could lead to future employment."

For more info and an application pack, contact Tracey Maddix, HR Support Officer, on: 020 8356 6935; or visit: www.hackneyhomes.org.uk/layout-work-apprentices.htm. The closing date for applications is 5pm on 10 August.

Youngsters have voices heard

YOUNG residents are being encouraged to take part in a project to help make a difference in their community. Established in 2010, the Youth Engagement Plus programme (YEP) gives young people an opportunity to have their voice heard by discussing community improvements, while meeting new people, attending training sessions and gaining key skills.

Youth committee members meet on a regular basis to arrange activities and events in their communities, and also represent the views of their peers at Tenant and Resident Association meetings, Neighbourhood Youth Forums, and on the Hackney Youth Parliament.

YEP's aim is to increase the amount of youth and community activities taking place on estates, while being a sounding board for landlords in order to help bring about change. Yolanda Lear, Landfield and Beckers committee member, said: "I have really enjoyed being a part of the YEP committee, it has helped to build my self-confidence and I've gained key skills in photography training sessions."

YEP is supported by Hackney Homes in partnership with Genesis, Sanctuary Housing and Rising Tide.

Summerfest time

BC Radio 1's Tim Westwood visited Hackney Community College (HCC) this month to see some burgeoning talent.

The Hoxton college put on its annual Summerfest, a platform for its student artists, designers and creatives. The 54-year-old DJ praised the talent on stage and tweeted support from the audience.

The event on 4 July was a showcase for students and also an opportunity for potential new recruits to learn more about the Falkirk Street campus and courses on offer.

In other activities on the day, catering students helped visitors to ice cakes and language learners led interactive games.

Businesses and cultural institutes from the borough also set up information stalls and activities, including bag design with Geffrye Museum's young ambassadors.

An open mic contest was run in conjunction with youth organisation Rising Tide. The use of a recording studio and a £100 prize for best open mic were won by HCC student Johndit Dimbu, 20, who studies business, and non-HCC student Estelle Lavard.

College principal Ian

Marva Antoine heads Hackney youth carnival troupe, Tropical Isles, which will welcome the Olympic torch to Hackney, as part of the One Hackney Festival on 21 July

WITH only days before One Hackney Festival on 21 July, Marva Antoine seems somewhere between enlightened calm and nervous freneticism.

Perhaps she's even mastered being in both states simultaneously after 10 years heading Hackney youth carnival troupe, Tropical Isles.

Founder Marva, her team, and countless young local performers have delighted audiences from the Royal Opera House to Notting Hill Carnival with their dance routines and costume designs.

They are now preparing for one of their biggest shows ever, when thousands will celebrate the arrival of the Olympic torch in the borough with the One Hackney Festival parade.

Speaking from the festival preparation space in Hoxton, she says: "Hackney carnival is different, it has its own community identity with young people. We're very excited about being involved in the parade to welcome the Olympic torch – this is such a special moment for us."

Along with her twin sister, Marva also runs the bridal wear store, House of Antoine, on Kingsland Road – which doubles as a training centre for Tropical Isles members. Young people – aged 13 to 19 – can take dance, choreography, video, printmaking and design classes there.

Marva says: "The kids take it seriously and they get to perform at big events. We've taken part in the Berlin Carnival of Culture, which had a parade of international carnival groups. They performed on stage to an audience of 10,000 – it was fantastic for them."

“We're very excited about being involved in the Olympic torch event – this is such a special moment for us”

The organisation also teaches the history of Notting Hill Carnival and celebrates Black History Month – all of which, Marva believes, gets the youngsters recognised as positive role models.

She says: "Some go into filming or get picked up by the BBC. Some go to St Martin's or other arts and fashion schools with a work ethic we instilled here."

An estimated 40 awards have been won by Tropical Isles since it first opened its doors in 2002. "When it comes to costume design and performance, we're quite good," Marva muses.

The work is funded from the Arts Council, and Hackney Council has also contributed to its development for the One Hackney Festival.

Marva is especially grateful for the 15 volunteers who helped with workshops, research trips and exhibition visits.

She says: "People hear about us and want to get involved. They may film events, or do some marshalling, or wear costumes to support the young people at carnivals."

In fact there are few skills that wouldn't come in handy for the charity that usually spends nine months preparing for just one event.

In May, London 2012 organisers flew Marva and the team to Samba City in Rio to see how one of the biggest carnivals in the world put on a show.

She says: "With the materials they have, their concept of design and detail was fantastic. Unless you see it live, it's hard to really understand how great their costumes are."

Tropical Isle's theme for this year's One Hackney Festival is 'It's A London Thing'. Marva explains: "It's based on London's iconic buildings. There will be six birds and six colours representing a theme of London. For example, the blue bird will represent the River Thames and yellow, Big Ben."

She adds: "It's a real challenge but you're full of adrenaline when you're working to see it finished. Watching young people put everything together is fantastic and to see families, friends and other people turn up to do the workshop is great. This really is a community event."

TO celebrate the 50th anniversary of Jamaica's independence, IndigO2 will play host to the Jamaica 50 Festival with some of the most iconic reggae, ska and dub artists appearing on its stage. Comedy Loft

25 July, Hackney Attic, 270 Mare St, E8 1HE

WHAT happens when a Geordie, a Pom and an Aussie walk into an attic? The punchline will be revealed at Hackney Picturehouse as part of the venue's new monthly stand-up event, which will host some of the most acclaimed young comedy talent from the international circuit. One of the borough's only regular comedy nights 'Comedy Loft' at Hackney Attic will feature three off-the-chart acts: Luke Benson and Bryony Kimmings (pictured) alongside Antipodean Celia Pacquola. It is hosted by fellow comic Tom Webb.

All three performers have been hailed by critics for their distinct, individual styles, ranging from the deadpan to the disarming and the reportedly dangerous (performance artist Kimmings recently made headlines with the alcoholic and comic feats of her '7 Day Drunk' show at Soho Theatre.) For those locals unable to make it to Edinburgh this season, Hackney Attic promises to stand and deliver.

The Taste of Something

24 July, 7.30pm, Chats Palace, E9 6DF

ARTS venue Chats Palace hosts the last of a trilogy of pop-up theatre shows offering new and makeshift plays.

The project, led by playwright Andrew Thomas and Hackney actress Ruth Rogers, sees players rehearse for only two days before curtain up. Final play 'The Taste of Something' is described as a 'blunt and contemporary play about only getting a piece of what we want'.

Andrew said: "It's funny, but it's dark and unsettling, too. I like to write plays that don't spoon-feed audiences.

"They are intelligent, and therefore my plays deliberately challenge and encourage debate."

Ruth Rogers thinks Chats Palace has a history of doing exciting ventures. She said: "The XX played here a few weeks ago. They are open to change and experimentation. And the space is amazing – there are so many options available to us for the staging of new plays."

She also believes the acting industry can be unforgiving, adding: "There really aren't enough acting roles for the huge wealth of acting talent out there.

"This is our way of taking the power back; we're creating work for actors. Actors rarely go into the industry to make a fortune – we do it to perform great roles in brilliant plays. Andrew's plays offer us both those things."

Tickets are £5 on the door. For more info, call: 020 8533 0227; e-mail: ruth@bodygossip.org or visit: www.chatspalace.co.uk

Dalston dolce vita

Described as one of the UK's coolest places by Italian Vogue, Kingsland High Street is benefiting from a number of regeneration projects

The peace mural outside the Eastern Curve Garden, Dalston Lane, has benefitted from new paving and flower planters. Below (from left): Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods; Mayor of Hackney, Jules Pipe; the Council's Head of Regeneration Delivery, Andrew Sissons; and Deputy Mayor of London, Kit Malthouse, visit the area. Bottom: Caitlin Elster of muf architecture/art, and Jo Gibbons of J&L Gibbons, who designed Making Space in Dalston

A £1.3million investment has transformed Kingsland High Street so that it is ready to welcome visitors from all over the world this year.

The funding was secured from the Mayor of London's office as part of a drive to ensure all the capital's public spaces are fit for a world-class city.

The main aim of the scheme was to improve the urban environment along Kingsland High Street to make it easier to walk and cycle in the area. The year-long scheme was designed by Transport for London (TfL) and Hackney Council.

Dalston – described by Italian Vogue as one of the coolest places in Britain – was visited by Kit Malthouse, Deputy Mayor of London; Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney; and Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, on 5 July. They viewed the completed improvement works between the junction of Crossway and Shacklewell Lane to the junction with Dalston Lane.

Mayor Pipe said: "The improvement works make it easier for residents and business to move around Dalston, and are part of the Council's wider vision for the town centre, which has included the new Dalston CLR James Library and Hackney Archive, as well as the cultural spaces of Dalston Square and Gillett Square."

Ben Plowden, Director of Planning for TfL Surface Transport, said: "We are delighted the public realm improvements have given Kingsland High Street – the busiest and largest town centre in Hackney – a pleasant look and feel for its residents, as well as for the many spectators who will descend on the borough in less than a month for the London 2012 Games."

The Deputy Mayor of London and Mayor Pipe were also shown improvements to the area thanks to the recent TfL 'Streets for People' scheme, which included planting new trees, improving pavements and removing railings, as well as the £1million 'Making Space in Dalston' project, which connected open spaces with new homes, Dalston Square and Dalston Junction station.

The project is a partnership between the Council, the Greater London Authority, residents and businesses.

Mayor Pipe, summed up the combined effect: "Taken together this will all serve Dalston's long-term future, as a growing town centre and better place to live for residents," he said.

If you see a runner in a pale blue and white hooped vest, you can be sure they're a member of one of East London's oldest athletics clubs – Eton Manor AC.

Along with Eton Mission Rowing Club, it is part of Eton College's philanthropic legacy from its activities amongst the poor of Hackney Wick, which began during the 1880s, and established the Eton Mission and Eton Manor Boys' Club.

The Boys' Club was founded by Gerald Wellesley, grandson of the Duke of Wellington, who arrived at the Mission in 1907. He was so moved by the poverty affecting local youngsters that he spent the next 13 years of his life working to give them opportunities to escape from their deprivation through social and sporting activities. He created a club for teenage boys in Daintry Street, and later an Old Boys' Club for past members, many of whom remained committed to the organisation for the rest of their lives.

Club life stressed the values of education, comradeship, social awareness and sporting excellence, priding itself on 'sportsmanship and gentlemanly behaviour on and off the field of play'.

The club was so successful that by 1913, when it split from the Mission, members were able to raise enough funds to build a new club house on the site of the old Manor Dairy Farm in Riseholme Street, from which it took its name.

Wellesley was joined in his work by fellow Old Etonians Alfred Wagg, Sir Edward Cadogan and Arthur Villiers – and it was Villiers, son of the Earl of Jersey, who became the driving force behind the Manor until its closure in the 1960s.

In 1923, he bought The Wilderness, 30 acres of water-filled former ballast pits on the Leyton side of the Lea River. This was developed into an extensive sports ground with football, rugby and cricket pitches; tennis and squash courts; a bowling green; swimming pool; running track; canteen and clubhouse – all dedicated to the memory of 20 club members killed during the First World War. A memorial to members who died in both World Wars still exists on the site.

Eton Manor produced a number of noted sportsmen, including footballer Nobby Stiles – star of Manchester United and England's 1966 World Cup winning team – and champion boxer Harry Mallin, the first man ever to win two successive Olympic gold medals.

In the run up to the 1948 Olympics, club member Les Golding was part of the torch relay, and once the Games had finished, Villiers acquired the cinder running track from Wembley stadium and had it transferred to The Wilderness. In 1952, it became London's first floodlit track, with events attracting huge crowds.

Members were not only encouraged to develop sporting skills, they also gained useful experience from helping to run the club, including producing its monthly 'ChinWag' magazine, sitting on various sporting committees, providing trained first-aid, and producing dramatic and musical performances for the local community.

Villiers closed the club in 1967, two years before his death, though many members still keep in contact. The Wilderness became neglected and derelict, but has now been redeveloped as the Eton Manor, a sporting facility for the 2012 Games, hosting the Paralympic Wheelchair Tennis competition, as well as housing training pools for aquatic events. After the Games, Eton Manor will become a tennis, hockey and football centre for local and regional communities.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

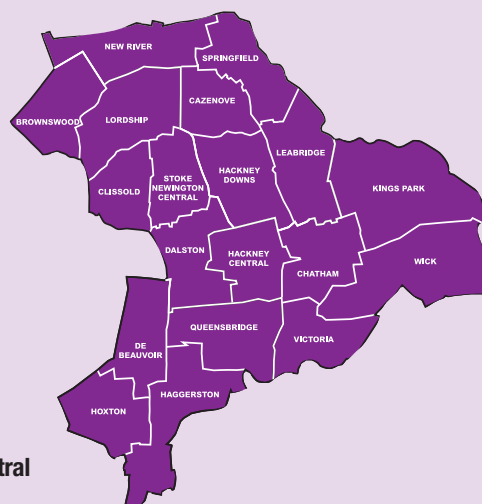

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/I-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

SUBRENA de Groot joined Hoxton Apprentice's Sodexo Healthy Eating Programme last September. She was recommended by the course co-ordinator to join the work placement scheme as a volunteer. In June, Subrena became a full time apprentice, and now works alongside Head Chef Leon and rest of the kitchen team. Subrena has always enjoyed working in the catering industry. She has experience in the hospitality sector in her native Guyana, working in customer service roles and as a cocktail waitress. When Subrena moved to the UK, she worked in schools overseeing lunchtimes. She was also involved in volunteering and travelled to developing countries helping people to establish sustainable businesses. Now, Subrena would like to share her knowledge of food, as well as helping young people to eat healthily and live independently.

The Hoxton Apprentice is a social enterprise set up to train unemployed Hackney people – both in the kitchen and front of house.

Six-month apprenticeships prepare people for the workplace and give them the chance to gain a NVQ in Hospitality. Profits are returned to Training For Life, the charity which operates the restaurant, to deliver more training for unemployed people. If you would like to offer an apprentice a job, or become an apprentice yourself, call Ben Anderson on: 020 7749 2800.

School keep clear markings: the results

A CONSULTATION exercise was undertaken between July and October last year on proposals to review the zig zag 'keep clear markings' outside Hackney schools and standardise the hours of traffic regulations.

The process gave schools the opportunity to either request new markings, or to ask for existing ones to be relocated.

The majority of responses were in favour of the Council's proposals. As a result, the Council has now renewed most school keep clear signs and road markings in the borough. 'No stopping' times have been standardised across most school roads in the borough from Monday to Friday, between 8am to 9.30am, and 2.30pm to 4.30pm; or 2pm to 5pm throughout the year.

Any motorists who stop on the school keep clear markings will be at risk of receiving a penalty fine.

Enforcement of these restrictions is important for the safety of schoolchildren. It helps ensure that pedestrians can be seen by drivers, motorcyclists and cyclists, and that children and parents have a clear view of oncoming traffic.

For more information about the consultation results, and the locations where the regulations have been implemented, visit: www.consultationfinder.com/hackney

YOUR GUIDE TO...

Hackney on parade 21 JULY

At 10.30am on Saturday, 21 July, a single horse-drawn Hackney cab will leave Shoreditch Park at the head of the One Hackney Festival Parade – a spectacular street procession that will launch a day of celebration all over Hackney to welcome the Olympic Torch. The Parade includes 15 floats, with six 'soundscapes' featuring electro, Afrobeat, carnival rhythm and sounds from the silk road. Leading samba groups from Rio including Fundicao Progresso's Monobloco and Sargento Pimenta (aka Sergeant Pepper – a Beatles samba tribute act) and the leading disabled carnival group Embaixadores da Alegria, join local groups as part of the Rio-London collaboration.

 Hackney

Olympic Torch comes home

When the Olympic Torch enters Hackney at Shoreditch High Street just before 4pm on Saturday, 21 July, it will be coming home. Its 7.9 mile journey through the borough starts just metres away from Barber Osgerby, the studio where it was conceived, and leaves via Hackney Marshes just two and a half hours later within sight of the Velodrome.

Every Hackney resident and business will be within 20 minutes walking or cycling distance from the Torch, and thousands will see it passing by their own front doors, as it travels up the A10 through Hoxton, Dalston and Stoke Newington. From there it travels along Lordship Park, and Amhurst Road to Hackney Central, before heading east along Morning Lane and Homerton Road.

Jules Pipe, Mayor of Hackney, said: "This is our chance to share in the excitement of the final build-up to the Olympic Games. We want residents to come out with their friends and families all along the route to cheer the Torch bearers as the flame gets closer to the Olympic Stadium."

Hackney residents will be among the first Londoners to greet the Torch following its arrival in London the night before, and it will visit all 33 London boroughs before arriving at the Olympic Park on 27 July. Thirty one Torchbearers will carry the flame through Hackney, with each one carrying the Torch for an average of 300 metres.

Crowds around the Torch have been huge across the country, and are likely to grow as it nears London. In Hackney the Torch will pass by key celebration points – the Shoreditch Festival at the canal at Haggerston, Gillett Square in Dalston, Hackney Town Hall Square and St John-at-Hackney church, and finally, Mabley Green – so there will be many places to celebrate as it goes by.

The Olympic Torch has 8,000 holes, one for each inspirational Torchbearer

A Hackney Torchbearer says

Hackney swimming coach, Vicki Carter, recalls her experience carrying the Torch in Newcastle on 15 June: "It was very exciting. It was raining but there were massive crowds all along the streets. Lots of children wanted to touch it and ask questions and it was so fun to be part of all the excitement. When I actually had the flame I was quite overwhelmed by it and honoured to be given the chance to be part of the Olympics. Since I got back to Hackney I have taken it to Kings Hall Leisure Centre with me and shared it with the adults and children I teach, I hope it helps get everyone keen to see the flame in Hackney. I can't wait to see the flame again."

57 million Britons are within 10 miles of the Olympic flame

Cree, 11, is one of a group from Randal Cremer school who will be taking part in the parade. She says: "I am a little bit nervous as there's going to be lots of people and I get a bit shy sometimes."

A day of entertainment all over Hackney

The planned event at Clissold Park will not now take place because the event site is waterlogged and has been deemed unsafe. Anyone who booked tickets for this event is being contacted. The parade will run as planned along the same 2.8 mile route, ending at Stoke Newington. There will be some extra pop-up surprises around the borough during the day which will be announced this week.

one ONE HACKNEY FESTIVAL 2012

A day of two halves

Your guide to watching the parade and Olympic Torch

There will be large crowds lining the parade route in the morning and Torch route in the afternoon, but if you plan ahead and choose your spot, you could make a day of it and watch both, while finding time to enjoy a festival event in your area:

- The parade leaves Pitfield Street at 10.30am, so get there early for the chance to see it take to the streets
- For the best view choose a spot close to home where there are likely to be fewer crowds. For the parade this will be at the start of the route. For the Torch this will be after it leaves Stoke Newington until the end of Amhurst Road, and from Morning Lane to Homerton Road

- The busiest areas will be where festival events are taking place, especially Stoke Newington Church Street, but also Dalston, Hackney Central and Mabley Green
- Once you have chosen your spot, stay there until the parade or Torch have passed. Don't follow them

- Travel on foot, by bicycle, or using the Overground as there will be delays to buses (see below for transport information)
- Stick to the pavement as there will be motor vehicles on the road for both the parade and Torch
- Check the local weather forecast on the day and come prepared with water, sunscreen, hat and/or rain protection
- Businesses along both routes will be open as usual for the purchase of food and drink

- Stewards will be posted along both routes so listen to their advice and follow instructions. Speak to a police officer if you see anyone acting suspiciously or any unattended bags or belongings
- Follow Hackney twitter at: #onehackneyfestival; or Torch organisers at: #london2012torchrelay for the latest updates.

DID YOU KNOW?

At every Games the flame is lit from the sun's rays at the Temple of Hera in Olympia, the site of the ancient Games

Parade line-up includes:

- Kinetika
- Old and new bicycles
- Children and parents
- African drummers
- Schoolchildren
- Pegasus
- St George and the Dragon
- Rio Bateria
- Goddess of Victory
- Gypsy Dancers
- Paraiso
- Tropical Isles
- Jaguar
- Hip Hop by Bigga Fish
- Land of Kings
- Street dancers.

Getting around

The best way to travel to the One Hackney Festival is to choose a location close to your home and walk or cycle.

This is because there will be road congestion and delays to buses throughout the day close to the route of the One Hackney Festival Parade. In the afternoon, there will be 15 minute rolling road closures operating along the route of the Olympic Torch.

Road closures, changes to right and left turns and loading and delivery restrictions will be in force from 9am to 5pm along the route of the parade from Pitfield Street, in Shoreditch, to the junction of Stoke Newington Church Street and Green Lanes.

Stoke Newington Church Street will be closed to traffic in both directions from 12noon to 5pm as it is likely to be very busy with the parade coming through at lunchtime, and the Torch arriving from 4.30pm.

Transport for London is keeping bus changes to a minimum, but these routes will be affected by delays at some point during the day: 30, 38, 56, 67, 73, 76, 149, 236, 242, 243, 276, 277, 393, 476 and 488. Traffic will still flow southbound along the A10 (Shoreditch High Street, Kingsland Road and Stoke Newington Road) so there will be diversions to four routes northbound: 67, 76, 149 and 242. Route 76 will also have a southbound diversion.

There will be no visitor parking in operation close to Clissold Park or along the A10 so do not attempt to visit any One Hackney Festival event by car.
